

A collaboration between the Australian Council for International Development and Australian universities

Building networks for development impact

Friday
17 November 2017
1:00 - 3:30pm

The Linkway
4th Floor, John Medley Building
The University of Melbourne

The Research for Development Impact Network, together with the Policy Lab and the Conflict, Development and Justice Cluster at the University of Melbourne, invites you to join a networking forum for researchers and practitioners of international development.

Showcasing successful cross-sector partnership examples in practice, you will learn from sector leaders and peers as they present from their own experiences.

The event will also provide an opportunity to launch How to Partner for Development Research, a new practical RDI Network guide to support NGOs and researchers at all stages of the partnership process.

Afternoon tea will be provided.
