The Research for Development Impact Network and the Institute for Sustainable Futures at the University of Technology Sydney, together with a partnership of Sydney-based NGOs and universities, invite you to join a networking forum for researchers and practitioners of international development.

The event will offer an opportunity to strengthen cross-sectoral partnerships and meet and greet like-minded individuals working in the sector.

The forum will also feature a focus on how an active Sydney development network can best engage in the process leading to Australia's Voluntary National Review in relation to the 2030 Agenda. The forum will discuss potential opportunities for practical action or peer support to effectively engage with DFAT or other government agencies in Australia's commitment to the Sustainable Development Goals.

This event is free to attend and drinks and snacks will be provided.
